Contents

Part I (Neo-)Marxist Approach, History, and Beginnings: Marxist Socialism and Canadian Social Realist Novels

1 Introduction: Reality, Realism and (Neo-)Marxist Definitions and Paradigms ......................................................... 3

1.1 Redefining “Realism” Before Réalisme: A Long Story Briefly Told from a Marxist Perspective ....................... 4

1.1.1 Plato’s Idealist Concept of Reality: The Parable of the Cave, the Analogy of the Mirror, and the Hierarchical Imitation of the Form ................................................................. 4

1.1.2 Aristotle’s Materialist Reversal of Plato’s Scheme: Nature, Things, Men and the Multiplicity of Possibilities ............................................................................................................................................ 7

1.2 Nineteenth- and Twentieth-Century Definitions of Realism(e) and Limitations: Historical Movement, Recurrent Phenomena, Manners of Representation, Reality Out There and the Functions of Language ......................................................................................................................... 9

1.3 Towards a Marxist Theory of Realism and Feminism ............... 11

1.3.1 Realism. Philosophical Theory: Materialist and Social Basis, the Concepts of Historical Change and Goals and Ideology ............................................................... 11

1.3.2 Realism, Literary Theory: The Concept of Typicality, Totality, Objectivity and the Principle of Contradiction....... 15

1.3.3 Marxist-Feminist Parameters, the Family: Power Relations Therein, Private Property and Commodification, Monogamous Mode of Reproduction and Sexuality; Socialization and Politicization of Female Labour, the Triad of Values ...................................................................................................................... 21

1.4 The Deficiency of English-Canadian Criticism on Social Realism and Socialism, the Revival of Marxist and Neo-Marxist Criticism and Methodology.............. 24

xxiii
2 Reinterpreting History from a (Neo-)Marxist Perspective: Social, Intellectual and Literary Background

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Section</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>2.1 New Realities: The Great Depression, Mass Production and Waste, Industrialization and Marxist Economic and Social Discourse</td>
<td>38</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.2 Harsh Realities: The Spanish Civil War, Twentieth-Century Imperialism, Revolution and Marxist-Leninist Political and Historical Interpretations</td>
<td>46</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.3 The Second World War, Global Capitalism, Colonialism, Imperialism and International Socialism and (Neo-)Marxist Sociopolitical and Ideological Theories</td>
<td>50</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.4 The Cold War, the Korean War, Mass Production, Urbanization, Anti-American Imperialism and (Neo-)Marxist Analysis</td>
<td>56</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.5 Conclusion</td>
<td>66</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

3 Early Beginnings of “Violent Duality”: From Prairie Realism to Urban Social Realism in Durkin’s The Magpie

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Section</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>3.1 Politicizing the City and the Country with the Ideologies of Socialism and Capitalism, Entering the Proletariat as a Class and Localizing and Radicalizing Temporality and Spatiality</td>
<td>72</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.2 Strategies of Characterization: Ideas and the Individual (Polarizing City Residents by Class and Ideology)</td>
<td>76</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.3 Women, the Family and Politics</td>
<td>81</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.4 The Politics of the Diary Form and the Textual Strategies of Ellipsis and Fragments</td>
<td>87</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.5 Economic, Sociopolitical and Ideological Language: Social Realist Imagery and Symbolism of Violence and Insanity</td>
<td>89</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.5.1 The Creation of a Diversity of Discourses in Literary Work</td>
<td>89</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.5.2 Images and Symbols: Social, Political and Ideological Significance (Images of the Artist, the Madman and the System)</td>
<td>92</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.6 Political Solution or De-romanticizing: The Difficult Relations Between the Pastoral Myth, the Socialist Utopia and the Capitalist Reality (Minor Conclusion)</td>
<td>96</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Part II Theory, Urban Alienation, Sex, Politics: Socialism and Canadian Social Realist Novels

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Section</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Introduction to Part II</td>
<td>99</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

4 Theorizing English-Canadian Social Realism

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Section</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>4.1 Prelude: From Realism Through Prairie Realism to Social Realism in a Broad Context</td>
<td>102</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.2 Towards an English-Canadian Discourse of Social Realism</td>
<td>104</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
4.3 Subject Matter: Old and New Varieties, Empirical and Theoretical ........................................ 104
4.3.1 Economic and Industrial Facts and Discourses ......................................................... 105
4.3.2 Social, Political and Ideological Events or Movements .............................................. 108
4.3.3 Sex and Its Economics, Morality and Politics ............................................................. 109
4.3.4 Feminism and the Politics and/or Poetics of Ideas ....................................................... 111
4.3.5 Characters and Settings ................................................................................................. 113
4.4 Literary Manner: Tensions Between Verisimilitude, Detailedness, Documentation, Authenticity of Language on the One Hand and Interpretation, Social Criticism and Ideological Utopianism on the Other .................................................... 119
4.4.1 Authenticity, Transparency of Language and Referentiality ........................................ 121
4.5 Conclusion ....................................................................................................................... 128

5 Metropolis in Contrast with Cabbagetown: Callaghan’s They Shall Inherit the Earth and Garner’s Cabbagetown .................................................... 135
5.1 “All the Polarities”: Social and Political Concretization and Vivification Versus Moral and Spiritual Abstraction and Universalization ................................................. 137
5.2 The Discourse of Difference: Class, Totality and the Economics, Morality and Politics of the “Ordinary People” ......................................................................................... 141
5.3 “The Very Idea” of Catholicism and Socialism Versus Life; Class in Relation to Strategies of Active and Passive Resistance ......................................................................................... 145
5.4 The Politics of Class Transgression and/or Transcendence ............................................ 152
5.5 “The Dear Domestic Circle”: Non-political Women’s “Life Before Man”, the Split Creature; the Image of the House ............................................................... 155
5.5.1 “Sex and Economics” (Callaghan) and Politics ............................................................. 160
5.6 The Power of Language and the Discourse of Resistance or Co-option ................................... 162
5.7 In Lieu of Conclusion: Ethics, Ideology and Totality ......................................................... 165

6 Revolution or Reform: Baird’s Waste Heritage Versus Birney’s Down the Long Table ................................................................. 171
6.1 Setting the Right Time and Place: Typicality, Totality and Social Realist Techniques ................................................................. 172
6.2 Intellectualization or Popularization: Ivory Tower Versus the Voices from the Bottom of Society; Class and Revolution ......................................................... 176
6.3 Caricature or Realistic Portrayal: Women in Politics, Public Actions and Intellectual Pursuits Versus Sexual Relations as Solutions ......................................................... 187
6.4 “Listen to the Voice”: Realistic Rendition, Stylization, Parody and Pastiche: Strategies of Appropriation ........................................ 190
6.5 Imagery of Violence, Power and Punishment ........................................ 196
6.6 A Matter of Life and Death: Revolution Repressed/Suppressed or Called For ........................................................................ 198

Part III Industrialization, Class Struggle, and Decolonization
Introduction to Part III ............................................................................. 201

7 From Vision and Ideal to Strategy and Reality: Grove’s
The Master of the Mill and Carter’s Fatherless Sons ........................................ 203
7.1 Canadian Critical Silence and Gaps ................................................. 204
7.1.1 “Liberal Humanist” (Hutcheon) Self-Reduplication and the Reinvention of the Case for Grove ........................................ 204
7.1.2 Critical Exclusion and Political Fear: The Case of Carter and His Socialist Discourse ........................................ 210
7.2 Fictionalizing Politics and History in Typical Time and Situations .................................................................................. 214
7.3 Multidimensional Characters: Totality, History and Capitalism and Socialism Personified .................................................................................. 219
7.4 Exploring the Marriage of Socialism and Feminism ........................................ 225
7.4.1 The Depiction and Images of Women as Opposed to Those of Men ............................................................................. 225
7.4.2 Political Sybils: The State as a House/Home ........................................ 226
7.5 The Appropriation of the Marxist-Socialist Discourse and the Creation of Modern Imagery and Symbolism ........................................ 229
7.6 Totalizing History and Society in the Socialist-Feminist Paradigm: Ideological Reading and the Political Unconscious .......................... 231

8 Class, Capital, and the Case of CanLit Par Excellence:
A (Neo-)Marxist Study of Margaret Laurence’s The Diviners .................. 235
8.1 Introduction: Class “in Theory” (and Practice):
Reading Margaret(s) Reading Morag Reading Marx Before/Besides Mannoni ................................................................. 235
8.1.1 The (Sub-)Liminal Space: Traditional or Pre-Marxist Socialist Concepts of Class ................................................................. 236
8.1.2 Blurred/Blurring Boundaries of Marxist Post(/)colonial Theories of Class or Marx, Marginalized, Minimized and Missing in the Middle, Now Recouped ............................................................................. 240
8.2 Towards (Neo-)Marxist Postcolonial Discourses and Praxis of Class and “Emergent” Multicultural Canadian Literature ............................................................................. 244
8.3 Incomplete and Ongoing Conclusion: “The Spectres of Marx” (Derrida 1994) Still Haunting ................................................................. 248
Contents

Part IV  Conclusion

9  Out of the Ivory Tower: Sociopolitical Solution and Criticism?......... 251
   9.1  Subject Matter .................................................................................. 253

Appendix: Canadian Chronology of Important
Events and Works (1910–2014)........................................................................ 263

A Glossary of Key Non-literary (Neo-)Marxist Terms .................................. 269

Works Cited ........................................................................................................ 281