Part I Essays

1 Somewhere (and Nowhere) Between Modernity and Tradition
1.1 Towards a Critique of International and Indigenous Perspectives on the Significance of Contemporary Chinese Art
1.2 Tradition, Modernity and the Development of Modern Art in China
1.3 Contemporary Art in China
1.4 Indigenous Debates on the International Reception of Contemporary Chinese Art
1.5 The Political Recuperation of Contemporary Chinese Art
1.6 Towards a Multi-voiced Critique
1.7 Indigenous Chinese Art Theory
1.8 International Art Theory
1.9 Conclusion

2 International Curatorial Practice and the Problematic De-Territorialization of the ‘Identity’ Show
2.1 Introduction
2.2 The Politics of Identity
2.3 The Politics of Identity and International Curatorial Practice
2.4 Deconstructing the Third Guangzhou Triennial, Farewell to Post-Colonialism
2.5 Beyond the Abstractions of Institutionalized Post-Colonialism

3 Qianwei (‘Avant-Garde’) Art in Reform-Era China
3.1 Introduction
3.2 Contemporary Chinese Art—Differing Discursive Perspectives
3.3 The Western(ized) Avant-Gardes and Post-avant-Gardes
3.4 Qianwei (‘Avant-Garde’) Art in China
3.5 Qianwei Art and the Persistence of (Subjective) Realism

4 Deconstructing Gao Minglu
4.1 Critical Reflections on Contemporaneity and Associated Exceptionalist Readings of Contemporary Chinese Art
4.2 Contemporaneity
4.3 Gao Minglu—‘Total Modernity in Chinese Contemporary Art’
4.4 Conclusion

5 Cultural Translation and Post hoc Intellectual Conceit
6  ‘Besiege Wei to Rescue Zhao’: A Stratagem Towards a Post-crisical Art .................................................. 65
6.1 Part I .................................................................. 65
6.2 Critical Distance and the Avant-Gardes ...................... 66
6.3 Antagonistic Aesthetics and the Neo-Marxian Turn ....... 68
6.4 Part II .................................................................. 70

7  The Double Way ..................................................... 79

8  Silence and Recuperation .......................................... 83

9  The Cult of Ai ........................................................ 85

10 The (Continuing) Story of Ai ...................................... 89

Part II  Conversations

11 Inside the Yellow Box: Conversation with Lynne
Howarth-Gladston and Paul Gladston ......................... 95

12 Track Changes: A Conversation with Jia .................. 105

13 Low Resolution: A Conversation with Zhang Peili .... 115

14 Answering the Question—‘What is the Chinese Avant-Garde?’:
A Conversation with Zhai Zhenming ......................... 121

15 Disjuncture—Tradition—Indirectness: A Conversation with Qiu Anxiong ................................................. 125

16 Collaboration as Struggle and Non-cooperation: A Conversation with Sun Yuan and Peng Yu .................................. 129

17 Time, Life and Nature: A Conversation with Liang Shaoji ... 133

18 ‘Sound Can Be Seen and Form Can Be Heard’: A Conversation with He Sai Bang .................................................. 139

Part III  Writing for Exhibitions

19 Immersion .......................................................... 149
19.1 Song Ling’s Early Development as an Artist
in the People's Republic of China ............................... 149 19.2 Liberalization of Artistic Practice in the PRC After the Death of Mao ................................................... 149
19.3 The '85 New Wave .............................................. 150
19.4 Avant-Garde Art Groups in China ......................... 152
19.5 The Pond Association (Chi She) ......................... 154

20 Overlit Realm/Inner World ..................................... 161